THE MANUSCRIPTS IN THE LIBRARY AT LAMBETH PALACE.

IN Wood's Athenae Oxonienses (ii. 519) there is a short biography of John Theyer. He was born apparently in 1597 and his career—not an eventful one—does not now concern me particularly. It is the conclusion of Wood's article which supplies me with a text: "His death hapned at Cowper's-hill [near Gloucester] on the 25th of Aug. in sixteen hundred seventy and three, and two days after <he> was buried among his Ancestors in the Church-yard at Brockworth, particularly near to the grave of his grandfather — Theyer, who had married the sister of one Hart the last Prior of Langthony near Glocester. He then left behind him a Library of ancient Manuscripts consisting of the number of about 800, which he himself had for the most part collected. The Foundation of it was laid by his grandfather, who had them from Prior Hart, and he from the Library of Langthony when it was dissolved, besides Household stuff belonging to that Priory. Afterwards Charles Theyer (grandson to our author John Theyer, who in his last will had bequeathed them to him) did offer to sell them to the University of Oxon, but the price being too great, they were sold to Robert Scot, of London, bookseller, who soon after sold them to his Majesty, King Ch. II., to be reposed in his Library at S. James's, he having first, as I have been informed, cull'd them."

Following up the data of this paragraph, we are led in the first place to ask whether any record exists of the contents of the Theyer Collection before its absorption into the Royal Library. We find that in Bernard's Catalogi Manuscriptorum Angliae (1697), ii. pp. 198—203, is a list of 312 MSS. belonging to Charles Theyer, of Gloucestershire: and a comparison of this list with Casley's Catalogue of the Royal MSS. shews that with very few exceptions the books enumerated now form part of the Royal Library. In other words, the collection of Charles Theyer, described by Bernard, is that which Charles II. bought. It is clear that when Bernard's Catalogue was issued the Theyer MSS. must have been for some years at St James's: but I do not find any note of the fact either in Preface or Appendix. It will be further noticed that the number of books (312) differs widely from that specified by Wood (about 800). An explanation of this fact is not immediately forthcoming.

We should expect at this stage of our investigation to find that the Theyer MSS. in the Royal Library were traceable in large part to Lanthony Priory. That, however, is not the case. Of a large number which I have myself examined, not more than two or three are Lanthony books. Worcester and Gloucester have contributed largely to the collection: and this is not surprising when we know that the ancestral abode of the Theyers was in the immediate neighbourhood of Gloucester. But as to Lanthony—clearly there is something more than meets the eye in the history as given by Wood. We can hardly doubt that he is correct in his account of the connexion between the old Theyer and Prior Hart, and the presence of many books from Lanthony on Theyer's shelves. We also see that these books must have been diverted to some other quarter before the purchase of the collection by Charles II. Can we at this time of day ascertain either when the diversion took place, or where the Lanthony books are now? I believe we can.

It would clearly be a very great help if we could arm ourselves with a document showing what books were in the Library whose relics we are pursuing. Such a document is very fortunately accessible. The Harleian MS. 460 contains a catalogue of the Lanthony Library made in 1380, which has been printed by M. H. Omont of the *Bibliothèque Nationale*¹. It enumerates some 500 volumes, and at a later stage a word will be said as to its arrangement and contents.

With this catalogue before us we are in a better position to prosecute our researches. Yet I doubt if anything but an accident could conduct us to a successful issue. And such an accident has befallen me. In January, 1899, I was permitted by the kindness of His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, seconded by the prompt assistance of Mr Kershaw, the Librarian of Lambeth Palace, to make a systematic examination of the MSS. in the Archiepiscopal Library. It was my hope that among them there would prove to be a large contingent from Canterbury: but the Canterbury books, though interesting, are not numerous. To some extent, however, I was compensated for this disappointment by the discovery that a very large number of the Lambeth MSS. are from Lanthony Priory.

I have mentioned the name of this establishment a good many times without any explanatory note. So I will just remark here that there are three Lanthonies known to fame. The first 'Lanthonia prima' was an Augustinian Priory in Wales, founded in 1108; the second, 'Lanthonia secunda,' a daughter of the first, and by far the more important, founded in 1136 in the outskirts of Gloucester; the third, Lanthony of the present day, an establishment presided over by the Rev. Mr Lyne, purports to have some connexion with the order of St Benedict. Throughout this paper when reference is made simply to Lanthony, the second Lanthony—that at Gloucester—is intended. It is of this house that we possess the Library catalogue; and perhaps it will be well to place here the few words which have to be said about that.

The books are entered in order as they stood on the shelves. There were five cupboards (armarii), containing respectively five, four, five, six, and one, shelves. It is natural to suppose that the fifth press, to which the one shelf belongs, was intended to provide for further acquisitions¹.

The other characteristic of the catalogue is that it is digested into subjects.

The first bookcase contained mainly Bibles, and glosses and commentaries upon various books of the Bible. In the second were the writings of Clement of Lanthony, the most prominent scholar the house produced, and those of Jerome, Ambrose, Gregory, Bede, Isidore, and others. The third began with Augustine, and contained also Hugo of St Victor, and minor theologians, while on its fifth shelf were the books on physic. The fourth was the most varied in contents, comprising Canon Law, Miscellaneous Divinity, History, Grammar, Poetry, Philosophy, and Custumaries². The fifth had dictionaries and a few service-books, together with some miscellaneous volumes of the theological class.

Whether considered in the light of its catalogue, or in that of the extant volumes, this collection as a whole does not rise above mediocrity. The house produced, as I have said, but one writer who attained anything like celebrity, in its Prior Clement. His Harmony of the Gospels is a sufficiently common book. Nine or ten volumes are specially connected with his name in the catalogue. One among these I have identified, and believe to be in his autograph. It is a commentary on the Acts, and is among the few Lanthony books

¹ The number of volumes in the several shelves varies very curiously. The annexed table in which Roman numerals are used to designate the cupboards, and Arabic for the shelves, will shew this :

I 1	10 vols.	II 1	8 vols.	III 1	12 vols.	IV 1	20 vols.	V 1	21 vols.
2	13 „	2	14 „	2	20 „	2	24 „
3	24 „	3	16 „	3	18 „	3	35 „
4	13 „	4	20 „	4	17 „	4	64 „
5	40 „			5	21 „	5	32 „

² Namely, the Custumaries of St Victor's, Cluny, the Chartreuse, Merton, and an old one of Lanthony itself.

in the British Museum (Royal 2.D.V). Otherwise, the catalogue contains very few entries that excite curiosity. The MSS. themselves are for the most part good normal twelfth century books. There is seldom anything earlier. A Psalter with English glosses (no. 427) is almost the only one I can point to which is older than the monastery itself.

As I have said, the number of Lambeth MSS. which I assign to Lanthony is very large—well over a hundred. The question will inevitably occur to my readers—on what grounds is each individual book identified? In a large number of cases we have the definite inscription, liber Lanthonie or the like to guide us. Where this is absent I have very often been led to the mark by the occurrence of a certain handwriting on the fly-leaves. It is a hand of the xvth century, which has furnished a great many of the books with tables of contents. Sometimes I have found it coupled with a Lanthony inscription, sometimes alone. In either case the provenance is certain. Then there is the name of a certain Canon Morgan, of Carmarthen, who may possibly be the writer of the tables of contents aforesaid: this, again, may occur either in conjunction with the other indications, or apart from them. Lastly, there are cases in which the contents of a volume, and its presence side by side with a number of books which are certainly from Lanthony, enable me with fair certainty to identify it with some entry in the catalogue. Doubtful items of course there are in my list: but I think it will be found that the evidence is fairly given in most instances.

I will now treat shortly of the Lambeth MSS. as a collection, and try to bring out the chief points of interest in their history. The manuscript library at Lambeth consists of somewhat over 1200 volumes, which are divided into several distinct collections. First, there are the Codices Lambethani, numbering nearly 600, collected mostly by Archbishop Bancroft (d. 1610). Then come Wharton's papers, the collections of Sir George Carew (chiefly Irish), of Archbishop Tenison, of Bishop Gibson: next the Miscellanei, and last the MSS. of Archbishop Manners-Sutton. It is only with the first block, the Codices Lambethani, that I am concerned now. The later collections are for the most part papers, of great interest, but of rather recent date.

It is well known that during the Protectorate the Lambeth books were made over to the University of Cambridge, and remained there until the Restoration. In Mr Bradshaw's Collected Papers a detailed account of the transaction may be readily found. Among the MSS. in the University Library there still remain several catalogues of the printed books and MSS. received by the University from Lambeth: and a very slight inspection of these serves to show that the Lanthony books already formed part of the Archbishop's Library. Of the book-buying archbishops before the Civil War we know that it was Bancroft who was the principal contributor to the Lambeth Library. His successor, Abbot, though he did add to the collection, did not, so far as I can discover, achieve much in the way of acquiring MSS. We must suppose provisionally, I think, assuming that Wood's story of Prior Hart of Lanthony is true, that Archbishop Bancroft bought from the elder Theyer a large number of MSS. including the greater part of the books which had belonged to Prior Hart; and we must suppose that Wood was mistaken in thinking that the Theyer MSS. passed intact into the possession of John and of Charles Theyer.

That is the last, I think, which need be said about Lanthony for some time. The most interesting of the Lambeth MSS. come from other sources, at which we will glance briefly.

Canterbury naturally claims the first place in our list: its contribution is interesting if not large. The Gospel-book of MacDurnan, that famous specimen of Irish art, was given to Christ Church by King Æthelstan. How it came to Lambeth is not known: but it has a binding on it, and red chalk marks therein, which shew beyond question that it was once the property of Archbishop Parker. Sixteen other Lambeth MSS. are from Christ Church. Taking them roughly in order as they stand on the shelves, we note a late but very important obituary, of which Wharton made large use in his Anglia Sacra: an early copy of Anselm's Letters; a volume of Richard, Abbot of Préaux, upon Genesis, whereof the second volume is at Trinity College, Cambridge; the Canterbury Letters, edited in the Rolls Series by the Bishop of Oxford; and a fine Psalter which belonged to John Holyngborne. He was a monk of the Priory late in the xvth century, and seems to have been active either in collecting old books, or at least in writing his name in books which already belonged to his monastery. I have met his name rather frequently. The well-known pictured Apocalypse of the xiiiith century (no. 209) is regarded by the authorities of the Palæographical Society as being a production of Canterbury artists. It contains the arms and effigy of a Lady de Quincey.

From St Augustine's Abbey we have eleven volumes. The oldest—of the eighth or ninth century—contains our only copy of a short tract by Victorinus, De fabrica mundi. In another are some palimpsest leaves of an early Kalendar. A third is a chronicle which is attributed in the Abbey Catalogue to Sprot or Sport.

Bury St Edmund's has six volumes to its credit. Five of them were unknown to me when I wrote my Essay on its Library: which Essay begins, I am glad to say, to need a supplement. The additions here are of considerable interest. A copy of the Arithmetic and Music of Boethius was once the property of Dr John Dee. I dare not now embark upon a disquisition I should much enjoy concerning that unlucky scholar's MSS., the sources whence he obtained them, and their present resting places. Many years ago Mr J. O. Halliwell printed the list of his MSS. for the Camden Society; and of late it has become possible for me to detect and locate a very fair number of his most interesting possessions in this department. He drew largely, I may say, from St Augustine's, Canterbury, through the medium, I suspect, of John Twine; and a great many of his books are, with Brian Twyne's library, now at Corpus Christi College, Oxford.

There is further an early MS. of Alcuin's Letters from Bury, at Lambeth, as early, perhaps, as any that exists. It is bound up with the Collations of Cassianus, and has been so bound since the early part of the fifteenth century at least. There is a title-page in the volume describing both books, and this description is couched in words which recur in the Catalogus scriptorum of John Boston, of Bury. Moreover, it is in the handwriting which I have always suspected to be the autograph of that remarkable bibliographer. Lastly, I will mention a Bible, rather a good one, of the ordinary thirteenth century type, but made interesting by a long note in sixteenth century English. In this the pedigree of the book is traced from the year 1384 to a date very near that of its absorption into the Lambeth Library.

Durham Priory sends a small but very noteworthy set of books. This foundation has certainly preserved more of its original library in situ than any other in the country: but still the number of Durham MSS. which I have encountered in various English libraries is growing to a remarkable figure. The items at Lambeth include first a sumptuous copy of the Historia Aurea of John of Tyuemouth, and second a tenth century copy of Ennodius in Carolingian minuscules, which once belonged to John Foxe, the martyrologist.

If adequate materials for the investigation could be found, the question of the history and contents of the Library of Ely Priory would be a very appropriate and interesting subject for some members of this society to take up. As yet, I have hit upon no trace of a catalogue, nor seen any document which gives the least idea of the importance or extent of the collection. Two clues there are to the identification of Ely books, which I believe to be unfailing. One is the presence in the margin of this sign $\ddot{\Pi}^+$; the other, the occurrence of the name of Robert Stewarde, which is usually accompanied by a sketch of the Stuart arms. This Robert was the last Prior of Ely, and was fond of writing his name in books. So was Augustine Styward, a relation of Robert's, who was Mayor of Norwich. I have set down seven Lambeth books as possibly from Ely: but in the case of some I waver between Ely and Norwich.

One of the better known Lambeth MSS. is a volume which contains three distinct parts. First a late xvth century paper copy of Roger Bacon's Opus Tertium—very likely from Oxford—used by Mr J. S. Brewer. Next, a tenth century Aldhelm with one fine Saxon drawing, reproduced as the frontispiece to Todd's Catalogue; and last, a MS. from Lanthony. It is satisfactory to me to be able to point out the provenance of the Aldhelm. On its fly-leaf is the inscription "cxxx. al. ca." Marks like this, consisting of a Roman number, followed by the abbreviations "al. ca." or "al. p.," always mean that the book containing them was once the property of the Abbey of the Holy Cross at Waltham. Another book in this same collection gives proof of this assertion (though the fact is known and has been noted by Macray in his Annals of the Bodleian). It is marked "cxli. al. ca.," and has, besides, a distich beginning Cruce sibi sancta librum de Waltham vindicat istum.

The meaning of the letters "al. ca." and "al. p.," as yet uninterpreted, I take to be "almariolum canonicorum" and "almariolum prioris."

There is another highly interesting composite volume (no. 149), of which the second part comes, I believe, from Lanthony, but the first, a tenth century Bede on the Apocalypse, certainly does not. It has at the end an inscription in fine large capitals (printed by Todd) to the effect that in the year 1018 it was given by the Alderman Æthelward to a Church of St Mary, at a place whose name has been entirely obliterated, partly at least by the use of galls. On the same page and not noted by Todd is another short inscription in green capitals, "In nomine Domini. Amen. Leofricus pater."

Now in 1018 the see of Devon was still at Crediton, and Leofric, a great book-man, as we know, was its bishop: and its church was dedicated to St Mary: and an Expositio Bede super Apocalypsim is in the list of the Latin books which Leofric procured for Exeter. Crediton therefore must be the name that stood in the erasure. Leofric may have scratched it out when he transferred the book to Exeter, and a later attempt to revive it has completed its deletion.

For Exeter MSS. in bulk we have to go to the Bodleian, where, owing to the surprising liberality of an early Chapter, there are over eighty. In them we very soon learn to recognise a hand that writes descriptive titles and the like. It is that of John Grandison, Bishop of Exeter (1327—1369), and no mean scholar, but less known now-a-days for that than for the screen crowded with imagery wherewith he masked the western front of his Cathedral Church. There are traces of his literary activity at Lambeth. In a twelfth century Augustine he writes that he gives it to his Church of Exeter, because he had taken great pains with the correction of it at Paris: and elsewhere in the book is a note written by him when studying at that famous university (in 1314).

Such are some of the more immediately interesting results of my examination of the external history of the Lambeth MSS. Naturally many riddles remain unsolved. I shall hope to learn in the future what library was the home of no. 52, marked "de sexto ordine xlii^{us}." I suspect it of having come from one of the great London houses. I should be glad also to throw some light on the great Bible (no. 3, 4) of which a description and some illustrations will be found in Mr Kershaw's interesting volume on the Art Treasures of the Lambeth Library. That the two volumes (which were not originally connected) are of English and not German execution I am well convinced. The beautiful Psalter (no. 233) I believe to be East Anglian; but a study of its heraldry is needed before a verdict can be pronounced. It intimately resembles in certain particulars a MS. acquired not long ago by the Fitzwilliam Museum from the late Mr William Morris.

It seems not inappropriate, in conclusion, to reckon up shortly the services which the occupants of the see of Canterbury have rendered to the world in the preservation of ancient literature. Whether we have any books which St Augustine may confidently be said to have handled is doubtful. Theodore of Tarsus has been persistently credited with the importation of several extant MSS., but one only—the Laudian MS. of the Acts—can be now said even to have been possibly his, or connected with him. From Plegmund (891) we have the blackened fragments of a copy of Gregory's Pastoral Care (Cotton, Tiberius B. xi.). Dunstan, as archbishop, owned no single book that we have now. The one that has the best claim to have been his dates from the time when he was Abbot of Glastonbury. In the Christ Church Catalogue Lanfranc is credited with a Homiliary, a Priscian, and three copies of Paul's Epistles. These I have never seen: but at Trinity College, Cambridge, there is a Corpus Canonum which he brought to England from Bec, and many relics exist, both there and elsewhere, of the school of calligraphy which I believe him to have introduced. To Anselm, perhaps the greatest writer of them all, I can unfortunately assign not one book; but St Thomas à Becket collected a large and valuable library in whose composition I seem to trace the influence of his friend, John of Salisbury. At present I have marked about half-a-dozen extant books as having been his property. Stephen Langton gave six volumes to Christ Church: one remains. Robert Winchelsey about 45: I have identified two. Of the libraries of Mepham, Whittlesea, Courtenay, Chicheley, there are in like manner, inconsiderable remnants. Warham's books are at New College; Cranmer's in many places; Pole's at New College; Parker's at Corpus Christi, Cambridge; Whitgift's (with over 200 MSS.) at Trinity, Cambridge; Bancroft's at Lambeth; Laud's—most numerous of all—in the Bodleian, and at St John's, Oxford. A few waifs have made their way to other places. Juxon and Sheldon were no great collectors: the latter is responsible for a few MSS. at Lambeth. Sancroft's mostly went to Emmanuel College: others are among the Tanner MSS. at the Bodleian. Tenison had a large library: part of his MSS. are at Lambeth, and others which were in the Parish Library of St Martin's in the Fields were dispersed in 1861. The best of these are in the British Museum. Wake's are at Christ Church, Oxford. Secker's—mostly autograph Biblical collections—at Lambeth. There also are the Greek MSS. procured for Manners-Sutton.

The list is an impressive one. In this regard, as in many others, I would say with all due respect that the see of Augustine has a lasting claim on the gratitude of England.

ADDITIONAL NOTE.

I will here venture to add a short note of such other Lanthony MSS. as have come under my notice. I shall be very glad to hear of additions to the list.

Catalogue (printed by H. Omont).

45-47. Libri moralium Gregorii in tribus voluminibus magnis.

Probably two volumes at Trinity College, Oxford (39, 40), given by Fr. Baber, Chancellor of Gloucester.

107. Clemens super Actus Apostolorum, liber mediocris.
British Museum, Royal MS. 2. D. v. Probably autograph.

168. Aug. de verbis Domini et de verbis apostoli, magnum volumen.

Queen's Coll. Oxford 309.

225. Exceptiones Roberti de Bracii, mediocris liber.
British Museum, Royal MS. 8. D. viii.

234. Decreta W(alteri) prioris in uno volumine cooperto viridi pelle.

Corpus Christi College, Oxford, 154, containing many Lanthony documents.

p. 220, note ³. Libri de jure terre qui dicitur Gracton (l. Bracton). Sold at the Phillipp's sale 1896, lot 136: of cent. xiii, xiv: contained Lanthony documents.

In addition to this I have encountered other books too late to be included in the fourteenth century catalogue. These are:

Trinity College, Oxford.

13. Hymns and Prayers: were owned by John Leche.

14. Nicolai de Munshulle opus grammaticum: belonged to John Leche.

16^A. R. Hampole's Prick of Conscience: belonged to John Leche.

49. Chaucer's Canterbury Tales: belonged to John Leche.

Corpus Christi College, Oxford.

83. Polychronicon (xv): 'olim abbatiæ Lanthoniensis.'

192. Rationale Lanthoniense (xiv).

Both these books were given by Henry Parry to the College. It is probable that among his other gifts some at least are from Lanthony. They are:

32.	Bernardi meditationes etc.	xiii
33.	Sermones etc.	xiii
36.	Sermons etc. in French	xiv early
